diminutive nams and bacon on feot, they are driven late the next one, the deserted pasture is irrigated and more alfalfa is grown for their food supply. Running water is on tap at each of these units and no hog has an excuse for not having water for his chasers or baths. This community street is so had out that it may be extended to the foothills with as many flanking units as are necessary to provide runs for the increasing herds. To allow those high toned porkers to revert to the species, there is a wide long ditch which makes a perfect hog wallow and in which the hog family is permitted to revel just before the bath in the dipping yats. Breeding pens, farrow houses and individual sleeping apartments are also provided.

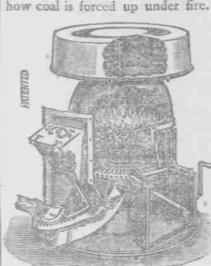

Careful Breeding.

Like people, hogs must have breeding, and the Cobb collection of hogs are the best bred in the valley. The Poland Chinas are the predominant strain, they being the "class" of the Cobb ranch; next in importance are the Duroc Jerseys, which are noted for their prolific breeding. Old Meddier's Chief, the king of the crowd, is handsome, if the term may be applied to a 300 pound hog. He stands on the tips

He has the dish face densting aristocracy and a white tip on his shoul to put the final touch of class to him. He is a prize winner at the indiana state fair and looks it. An old Duroc Jersey bear on the Cobb ranch weighs an even foot, has tushes like a wild boar and rules the Duroc herd as a potentate. Each of the Cobb hogs is registered, has a number in his or her nose, has a record at the ranch house of what he or she has done and can do, and the process of scientific climination is applied here as in other affairs of life, for if a sow fatis to deliver the goods she gets a black mark and it's the butcher for her.

"Money in Hegs."

From 50 sows aft. Cobb expects to get an average of seven and one-half plags per litter, twice each year, or all average of 15 play such year. Fattening them for market at 200 pounds and sold at the present market price of 31 derive from his hor ranch per year an average of 15 play such year. Fattening them for market price of 32 derive from his hor ranch per year an average of 15 play need to be the settmated from past experione that it costs on an average of 15 play here. He has spend to be the direct of the arch. At this rate Mr. Cobb says his affalfa nets him 160 a ton when fed to hogs and nothing class is more than double the market price of hay. In addition, affalfa has proved to be the finest food for hogs in the IS Paso valley, Respond to the market food for hogs in the IS Paso valley, Respond their bowels open and the general condition of the hogs excellent.
